SOME BASIC UNDERSTANDINGS

It is good and appropriate to want to be listened to and to wish that one's beliefs, feelings, and opinions will be heard.

Listening to others is very important. It is equally important to share with others.

In any church, particularly in a Baptist church, no one gets their way all the time.

The larger a church gets, the more opinions there are. For example, if ten persons are in a room there will usually be at least eleven opinions.

The church is not the most important point. The point is to love the world and all people in it.

Much of what goes on in a church has a lot to do with personal preferences and little to do with the kingdom of God. Or put another way, God probably does not care about all the stuff we get so uptight about.

I understand and agree with the above.

Your signature is optional because some people prefer not to be identified with their opinions, thoughts, and feelings.

The wisdom and insights of a church's more "silent" people are valuable and valid. A church can be dominated by people with strong personalities and/or loud voices, people like preachers, for example. Part of Wedgwood's ministry is to give voice to those who have little or no voice both in society and within the congregation.
